

Elizabeth Green is a native of Wisconsin, but lived in Maryland for 19 years. She received a bachelor degree in piano performance from Michigan State University, where she studied with Ralph Votapek, and then studied with Gyorgy Sebok at Indiana University where she received her masters in performance. She then went to the Peabody Institute in Baltimore where she received her doctorate in performance while studying with Julian Martin. Elizabeth is happy to be back in Wisconsin and currently teaches at her private studio in Germantown, as well as at the Steinway Gallery in Wauwatosa. She is an active chamber music performer as well as an accompanist for the Milwaukee Children's Choir and substitutes playing organ at her parish on the south side. When she is not practicing or performing, she is a realtor at First Weber in Menomonee Falls.
